The diplomatic correspondence concerning the withdrawal of the French troops from Mexico can not fail to be read with profound interest. France, it will be seen, at length yields without obtaining what she has all the time insisted on as a condition of the evacuation of Mexico. No promise has been held out to her that the Government of Maximilian will be acknowledged. Only the assurance, of before given, is repeated, that the chief principle of the policy of the United States is non-intervention, and that this principle will be adhered to in the future relations of the United States to Mexico.

The correspondence contains some interesting dispatches concerning the intended enlistment of Austrians for the army of Maximilian. Mr. Motley is informed that he can not make his protest against any act of the kind on the part of the Austrian Government to emphatic. He is instructed to represent to Austria tich an act be one of hostility toward the Mexican Republic, and that the United States in such a case would not engage to remain a neutral observer.—New York Tribune.

Chief Franklin yesterday made a thorough search among the enlistment papers of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Causiry, to ascertain if there was a member of the regiment named Jacob Genther, and if so, to got a description of the same. The story of Antoine Probst was, that the accomplice Genther, or Ganter, was a member of the Eleventh Cavalry, which regiment was consolidated with the Fifth Cavalry, and that he belonged to company I. The only name found which resembles that given by Probet is Jacob Gensler, of company H, who is put down in the descriptive list as forty-three years old, five feet eight inches high, and light complexion. This does not, in any respect, answer the description given by Probst. An effort will, however, be made to find Gensler, who at the time of his enlistment, belonged to York county, Pennsylvania.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ARREST OF ADD. EVANS ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER.—Add. Evans, a former citizen of Lafsystte and more recently of Logansport, where he was lately married to a highly respeciably lady, was arrested in this city last evening on a charge of murder. He was in the city on business, and was evidently taken completely by surprise. He professes entire ignorance of any foundation for the charge, and seems confident of his sbility to prove his entire innoceance upon trial. HEALTH OF THE CAPITAL.—The health of HEALTH OF THE CAPITAL.—The health of Washington is beginning to attract some strention. Small pox and variotide exist here to a much greater extent than is generally supposed. One or more schools have been broken up by small pox, and many individual cases have transpired in various sections of the city. Senator Fessenden has been contined for a week with variotid, and is more scriously sick than has been generally known. The practicing physicians of the city report a largely increased per centage of sickness, arising from derangement of the bowels. Sanitary precautions to prevent the appearance of cholera are enlisting discussion, but as yet little or no action has been taken by individuals or city authorities. In view of the probability of an approaching sickly summer, the adjournment of Congress between this and the middle of June is looked upon as a certainty.—Weekington correspondence New York Herals.

NUMBER 153. Frem the United States Economist and Dry Goods Re The Destiny of the West.

The Bestiny of the West.

It is of the utmost consequence to the whole country that the public mind should be imbused with correct views as to the resources of the Western States, and the conditions essential to their due development. The great distance of that country from the central and seaboard population places its producers under an insurmountable geographical disadvantage, in the marketing of a large proportion of its productions; and it is, therefore, the more important that no artificial restrictions should be imposed upon its commerce. Yet it is an important that no artificial restrictions should be imposed upon its commerce. Yet it is an undeniable fact that, for years, the tendency of legislation has been to compel the Western States to pay tribute to artificially fostered interests in the middle and eastern sections. A theory has been established among a political faction that New England, New York and Pennsylvania should manufacture for the West, and the whole tenor of commercial legislation has been regulated upon that principle. The West has surely a right to demand that it should be free to purchase what it could not, produce in the cheapest market.

Such advantages could not have failed to deplete the labor markets of Europe, and to draw hither an immense amount of foreign capital; and the West might have been to-day the chief seat of American civilization.

—The Sullivan Democrat says of the wheat prospects: "We have heard a great deal about the blighted prospects of wheat in the country, and made inquiries of a gentleman who is a careful observer and a competent judge; he says he has been over different parts of the country, and while some fields look hadiv, others look well and give promise of a will not always endure being compelled to to support another, must lay the foundation for the gravest sectional divisions. The West a will not always endure being compelled to support Eastern manufacturers in industries for whichtthey have not the requisite conditions for producing as cheaply as others; and it would be well for those who are so enthusiastic in their efforts to build up a great manufacturing interest upon protection to remember that any day they may be surprised by a Congressional vote that will consign protection to its proper place in the dead past. The remarkable activity with which free trade or markable activity with which free trade or cities, is symptomatic of an uprising anizations are being formed in the large Western cities, is symptomatic of an uprising the whole country oppressively for giving effect to the whim of a chass of capitalists to be manufacturers, whether they should be such or not. Does the manufacturing interest impains that the West is going to indorse the manufacturing interest in the whole question of sectional protection to take the whole question of sectional protection to take the bottom? Is it wisted to go on extending manufacturing operations indiscriminately upon the presumption that the West and the bottom? Is it wisted to go on extending manufacturing operations indiscriminately upon the presumption that the West and the bottom? Is it wisted to go on extending manufacturing operations indiscriminately upon the presumption that the West and the such as the bottom? Is it wisted to go on extending the whole question of sectional protection to the bottom? Is it wisted to go on extending the whole question of sectional protection to the presumpt incubus? The ceaseless demand for "more protection" only hastens the inevitable downiall of the protective system; and, for this reason, it may be perhaps no ultimate injury to the country that Congress should enjoy unrestrained dicease in the imposition of additional duties discriminating against foreign products.

For ourselves, for the sake of the country at large, we hope that this reformation in our commercial policy is not far distant. We desire this result, not for the purpose of limiting our manufacturing industry; but because then large, we hope that this reformation in our commercial policy is not far distant. We desire this result, not for the purpose of limiting our manufacturing industry; but because then every branch of production, manufacturing or otherwise, would be placed upon a natural and sound basis. Such a condition of things would incalculably conduce to the development of such manufactures as the country furnishes the natural requisites for prosecuting. The cheapness of living, combined with the large yield of labor, would bring to our shores an immense accession of population. The large profits upon labor would give us an intelligent working, population—one of the first requisites to manufacturing progress. The low cost of living would enable the laborer, if necessary, to give his labor for as low a price as it is obtainable in the principal manufacturing countries of Europe, and yet be in a better condition than the operatives of the old world. So that we should then have another essential to successful manufacturing, viz.: cheap labor, which we have fever had under the system of protections. Nor is this all. The very process that would render labor cheap, prosperous and abundant here, would render it proportionately scarce and dear in Europe. The withdrawal of labor from Great Britsin and Germany wenid produce a scarcity of workmen there, thereby placing their manufacturers in a lesse advantageous position for competing with our own; and this very circumstance would cause an emigration of capital to succeed the emigration of labor. Herein in is the true and only really effective protection for Americae manufactures. It is the protection of nature, and, therefore, infinitely more reliable than the fictitious regulations of blind legislation. It is not to be denied that, under such a condition of affairs, branches of manufacture in which we have not the same natural advantages as other countries, and which have subsisted among us, and the somer they are extinguished the better for the country at large. Those who are employ right to expect that the whole community should be taxed to sustain them in an improper investment.

It is one of the evils of protection that it tempts to the employment of capital in enterprises for which we do not possess the requisites to economical production. Congress undertakes to make any foolish employment of capital tremunerative by taxing the whole community to sustain it. On the other hand, under a natural system, the industries based upon adequate natural advantages would he all the more presperous from the fact that they would be exempt from Governmental levies to support manufactures devoid of the natural condition of success.

The West can have no true prosperity until this condition of industrial and commercial freedom is attained. And the fact cannot be too deeply impressed upon the people of that section, that this condition so essential to their prosperity will, never be realized except through their own resolute demand. That such a reformation must come there can be no question; for there are no errors, no wrongs, that do not ultimately work out their own curse. But just as certain is it, that never until the West raises its unanimous voice for commercial freedom will it find the direct pathway to that splendid deatiny of population, wealth and civilization, for which providence has so distinctly ordained it.

The Civil Rights Bill. The Constitution of the United States provides that Congress shall have the power of naturalizing foreigners. It also provides that the citizens of each State shall have the rights of like classes of citizens in other States.

Now, we take it that every provision of the Constitution carries to Congress the power of legislating to execute that provision. But it must legislate within the provision, not beyond it. It can not enlarge the constitutiona provision by legislation. It may not be expedient for Congress to exert all the powers of legislation it possesses. In-deed, it would often be very inexpedient for it to do so. Congress has power to levy internal taxes, pass bankrupt laws, etc., but it is not, at all times, expedient that it should exert these powers, and tax and make bankrunts simply because it possesses the powers.

Now, we think, if Congress had power to pass the Civil Rights bill it was very unwise because entirely unnecessary that it should do so; and the power was exerted simply because it was a case where Congress could show its power in humbling the States. But had Congress power to pass the bill? The Civil Rights bill was not a naturalization law, hence, it could not be passed by virtue of the naturalization clause in the Constitution. Had it been a bill simply providing for the enjoyment, by citizens of the different States, of the right given to such citizens by the Federal Constitution, the bill would have been within the second clause of the Constitution mentioned at the head of this article. But the bill is not thus restricted: it assumes to go beyond the province of simply providing for the enjoyment by State citizens, persons already possessing State citizenship, all that the clause of the Constitution contemplates, of inter-State rights; the act proceeds to create eitizens of States and of the United States. Can the Congress do this except by the simple natiralization of foreigners, is the question? The upreme Court of the United States will have to decide the question. We extract from the argument of REVERDY JOHNSON:

argument of REVERDY JOHNSON:

Mr. Justice Curtis held that the Constitution of the United States assumed that citizenship might be acquired by nativity; that it was the common law; that it was the law of the civilized world, that he who was born in a country, and not made a slave at the moment he was born by any municipal regulations, became, by virtue of his birth, a citizen, but he by no means held that the consequence of his being a citizen of the United States by virtue of his birth made him a citizen of any State of the United States. Let me read a was the common law; that it was the law of the content of the cont

Now, mark the qualification. It is not the nativity that imparts the character of citizen or alien; there must be added to the fact of nativity the other fact that at the time of his birth he is by the Constitution or laws of the State a citizen of that State; and the two things added, birth and citizenship, by the laws of the State he became by virtue of the two a citizen of the United States. If there two a citizen of the United States. If there could be any doubt that I correctly interpret that part of the opinion, it would be speedily removed by subsequent portions of the opinion, to which I will call the attention of the Senate. He says the first section of the second article of the Constitution uses the language a natural born citizen. It thus assumes that citizenship may be acquired by birth. He then goes on to state that the Constitution, having recognized the rule that research. having recognized the rule that persons born within the several States are citizens of the within the several States are citizens of the United States, one of four things must be true. Now, what are they? I will read, first, that the Constitution itself has described what persons shall be or shall not be citizens of the United States. Next, that it is referred to each State to determine what free persons, born within its limits, shall be citizens of the United States. I shall not read everything he says in relation to three of the alternatives, but only a portion of it. He says if there be such a thing as citizenship of the United States acquired by birth within the States which the Constitution expressly recognizes and no one dured by birth within the States which the Constitution expressly recognizes and no one denies, then these four alternatives embrace the entire subject, and it only remains to select the one which is true, that the Constitution fit-self has defined citizenship of the United States by declaring what person born within the several States, shall be or shall not be citi-zens of the United States. It contains no such

He may dismiss the first alternative as with-He may dismiss the first alternative as without doubt unfounded. that is to say, the Constitution has not stated, or, to use the language of his opinion, the Constitution has not described what native-born persons shall or shall not be citizens; the propositions, to use his own language, may be dismissed as a proposition wholly unfounded. Well, if that is not true, then is the other true, if the Constitution flore not citizen declare who are to be citizens. does not of itself declare who are to be citizens of the United States? Is there anything in the Constitution which of the United States? Is there anything in the Constitution which confers upon Congress the power to do the same thing? Let us see what Justice Curtis says about that: "Has it empowered Congress to enact what free born persons, born within the several States, shall or shall not be dizens of the United States? If such power exists, then the Constitution has empowered Congress to create privileged classes within the States, who alone shall be entitled to the franchise and privileges of citizenship. If it be true that the Constitution has enabled Congress to declare what free persons, born within the several States, shall be citizens of the United States, it must at the same time be admitted that it is an unlimited power. If this subject is within the jurisdiction of Congress, it must depend wholly on its discretion." Then he proceeds, immediately afterward, in very clear and forcible language, to say that the Constitution confers no such power upon Congress. Now confers no such power upon Congress. Now I will read a part of what he says:

"Among the powers exaressly granted to Congress, is the power to prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization. It is not doubted that this is a power to prescribe a rule for the removal of disabilities consequent upon foreign birth. It appears, then, that the only power granted to Congress to legislate concerning citizenship, is confined to the removal of its disabilities of foreign birth."

Now leaving the inquire whether there is Now, leaving the inquiry whether there is in the Constitution any express autnority conferred upon Congress to legislate at all in relation to the statute of citizenship, he proceeds to inquire whether there exists any implied power to establish it. He says: "Whether there be anything in the Constitution from which the power may be implied, will best be seen when we come to examine the two other alternatives which are whether all free peralternatives which are whether all free per-sons born on the soil in several States, or such of them as may be citizens of States respectively, are thereby citizens of the United States. He says the last of these alternatives is in my judgment the true one—that is to say, there is no power expressed or implied which confers upon Congress any authority at all to declare what free persons are to be considered as citizens because of their birth within the State, except such as, by virtue of their birth under the constitution and laws of the State of their birth, became citizens of the United States, and he says that alone contains the truth undoubtedly. As has been said, it is a principle them as may be citizens of States res and he says that alone contains the truth undoubtedly. As has been said, it is a principle of public law recognized by the Constitution itself, that birth on the soil of a country both creates the duties and confers the right of citizenship. That is the doctrine relied upon by my friend from Illinois (Mr. Trumbull.)

It must be remembered that though the Constitution was the designed form of the United States of America—a government to which loyalty and obedience from the citizens was to be given in return for protection and privileges—yet the several sovereign States, whose people were their citizens, were not only to continue in existence, but with powers unimpaired except so far as they were granted to the National Government; and among the powers reserved to the States was that of determining what persons should not be citizens. Having come to the conclusion that that power was not delegated to the States, the other conclusion is consequent upon that, that it remains as it stood before, a power exclusively belonging to the States respectively. Now, Mr President, what is the consequence of that doctrine, if it be true? And I think I may challenge my friend from fillinois to dispress it.

The authority before citizenship under the Constitution of the United States is not delegated to Congress, except in one particular in stance, and that not one which was intended to make the party in whose favor the newer states are stated and the doctrine of State Rights.

The Lorentz May I was in the theory of State Rights. Very well, this proves the allegation of the Democrats, that the Northern Abolt for Republicans and the south Carolina Nullifiers were the guilty parties in causing the war. They were the states are the party in whose favor the newer and the control of the Con wo make the party in whose favor the powers might be exercised a dition of the fulled States, merely for the purpose of removing the States, merely for the purpose of removing the purpose of the purpose of the purpose of removing the purpose of the purpos SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION

we have this clear statement on the same point:

We have repeatedly said, and we once more insist, that the great principle embodied by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence, that Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, is sound and just; and that if the slave States, the cotton States, or the Gulf States only, choose to form an independent nation, they have a moral right to do so.

But while we were in the midst of the war, Mr. Greeley, in the Tribune, on the 21st of February, 1863, said:

I was willing in the winter of 1860-61, to let the cotton States go if they really desired it. I was not only then willing that the Union should in good faith make them the offer, but I now deeply regret that it was not made and lidicial institutions ours near a conservation blance, we adopt their principles respecting the operation and effect of a pardon, and look into their books for the rules prescribing the manner in which it is to be used by the person who would avail himself of it. son who would avail himself of it.

In 7 Bacon's Abridgement, page 416, it.

It was formerly doubted whether a pardor could do more than take away the punishment, leaving the crime and its disabiling consequences unremoved. But it is now settled that a pardon, whether by the King or by an act of Parliament, removes not only the punishment, but all the legal disabilities consequent months or the crime of the consequent who can be compared to the consequent to the conse uent upon the crime.

The doctrine is thus stated in 1 Bishop

Criminal Law. 718:
The effect of a full pardon is to absolve the earty from all the tegal consequences of his rime, and of his conviction, direct and collatrine, and of his convenience, whether of gal, including the punishment, whether of mprisonment, pecuniary penaity, or whatev-ar else the law provided. Also in 5 Bacon's Abridgment it is laid

Also, in b Bacon's Abbacon's lown:
It seems agreed that a pardon of treason or lelony, even after an attainment, so fat clears the party from the infamy, and all other consequences thereof, that he may have in section against any who shall afterward call him a traitor or felon, for the pardon makes him, h traitor or recent for the parton limites nim, it were, a new man.

Blackstenesays:

A pardon may be pleaded in bar as at once destroying the end and purpose of the indictment, by remitting the punishment which the prosecution is calculated to inflict.

Also:

The effect of such a pardon by the king is to make the offender w new man; to acquit him of all corporest punishment and forfetures annexed to that offense for which he obtains annexed to that offense for which he obtains his pardon.

In Lilly's Abridgement the doctrine is thus laid down:

A pardon doth discharge net only the punishment which was to have been inflicted upon the person that did commit the offense bardoned, but also the gullt of the offense itself. It pardons culps so clearly that in the eye of the law the offense itself. It pardons culps so clearly that in the eye of the law the offense is as innocent as if he had never committed the offense.

In view, then, of all the surrounding circumstances, it does appear that we should lay our party prejudices aside, elevate ourselves to the situation of affairs, and modify the oath, so far at least, as is recommended by the Honorable Postmaster General, and the President of the United States.

The Maine and Sunday Laws These will be the great political measures the Republicans. Steadily the Republic papers of the State are coming out for the abs lute prohibition, as a party measure, of the retail of spirituous liquors. If the Republi-cans carry the Legislature, it is scarcely loubted an absolutely prohibitory law will be enacted. We quote from the editorial leader of the Union City Eagle of the 25th instant er of the Union City Eagle of the 20th instant;

"TEMPERANCE.—We Understand that the circulation of the Indiam State Temperance Journal has become very large already, securing not only the permanency, but the maintenance of the high character of the paper. We are glad that this is the case, for no reform is more neble our more necessary than the temperance reform.

But we must acknowledge that we would rather see the State organ take higher ground on the temperance question than the Journal has taken. The doctrine that a majority should govern is a very good rule when either side of the question is right. But we do not think that a majority have the right to establish that which is known to be a great moral wrong. What would we think of a man who would contend that counterfains, stealing, way robbery, or the maintenance of b houses, should be allowed and upheld b houses, should be allowed and upheld by law, in any neighborhood or township where a majority of the citizens might be in favor of the same. But the retailing of intoxicating liquors do as much arm in a neighborhood as any of the crimes above named would do. Then why should the law sametion it en any terms? We believe that but very little will be accomplished by legislation in the temperance reform until the laws prohible entitly the sale of intoxicating liquors, as a beverage, in any quantity.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—A private letter from Plymouth, Marshall county, contains the ollowing sad intelligence:

following sad intelligence:

"James C. Vinnedge, an old and highly esteemed citizen of this county was instantly killed on last Wednesday by a stroke of lightning. He was in his cellar at the time of the occurrence, immediately beneath the chimney, which rested upon the floor above. The lightning struck the chimney, and passed down through the house, doing but slight mischief, to its unfortunate victim who stood below. His death was instantaneous. Although his hat was rent from the top of the crown to the hat was rent from the top of the crown to the edge of the rim, his body here no trace of the dread destroyer. He leaves a wife and severa grown up children to moun his sudden de mise. He was a man of large heart, and of kind and affectionate nature. His memory will not soon periab from the remembrance of will not soon perish from the remembrance his many friends."

FIRE.-About three o'clock yesterday afternoon the grain warehouse of Dr. T. B. Elliott on the corner of Alabama street and the In dianapolis and Cincinnati railway, took fire in the roof and soon burned to the ground notwithstanding the efforts of the fire depart ment. The origin of the fire is not known to certainty, though it is supposed to have been caused by a spark from a locomotive. The building belonged to the Indianapolis and Cincinnati railroad, but had been rented to Dr. Elliott. It contained three thousand ushels of wheat, some flour and some corn. The loss in grain and fixtures is probably ter thousand dollars, covered by insurance to that amount in the Liverpool and London.

The Bellefontaine freight house, near by caught in the roof, but, fortunately, the fire was extinguished before it had established itself. A high wind was blowing at the time, and it is a wonder that surrounding building were not involved. A freight train standing near the warehou was in imminent danger, but a gallant poney ushed in and hauled it out of danger.

Calves. We understand that, in the last invoice of goods received by a popular Washington street dry goods house, may be found several bulky packages of artificial calves. The only drawback to the introduction of th tilting hoop is thus done away with. Hereto fore that article has been worn, but to a limit-ed extent. Only those ladies to whom nature has been beautiful in the matter of calf, dared to sport the tilts; but now, the most spindle shanked of the sex, if any such there be, car provide themselves with a pair of robust and symmetrical calves, for a small outlay. Judiously selected, and properly fitted, with the tiltingest of heops, she may sail up Washington street with the proud consciousness that she is dressed a la mode. A lady friend informs us that a great desideratum is to have the calf properly attedy as well as fashioned In Paris and New York, there are numerou artists who will measure a lady for a pair of calves, and fit them so nicely as to deceive the very elect; but our people not yet being educated up to that point, will have to trust to their own skill. Of course they are liable to blunder at first, but perseverance will inevi-tably triumph. In the course of time we shall probably have educated cutters and fitters among us, who will save the ladies the vexation and trouble of doing their own work. We do not know that the enterprising importer of the first drove of calves cares to advertise them, just at present, but, as the ladies will all be anxious to know who has got them we will state that they may be found on Wash ington street, between Meridian and Pennsylvania-in just the place where the people would most naturally look for the latest fash ions, and aff the novelties of the day-in
